

Troublesome pinning of notes to a board is now history. Students, teachers and visitors can now expect up-to-date information on a digital blackboard.

■ Ideally informed

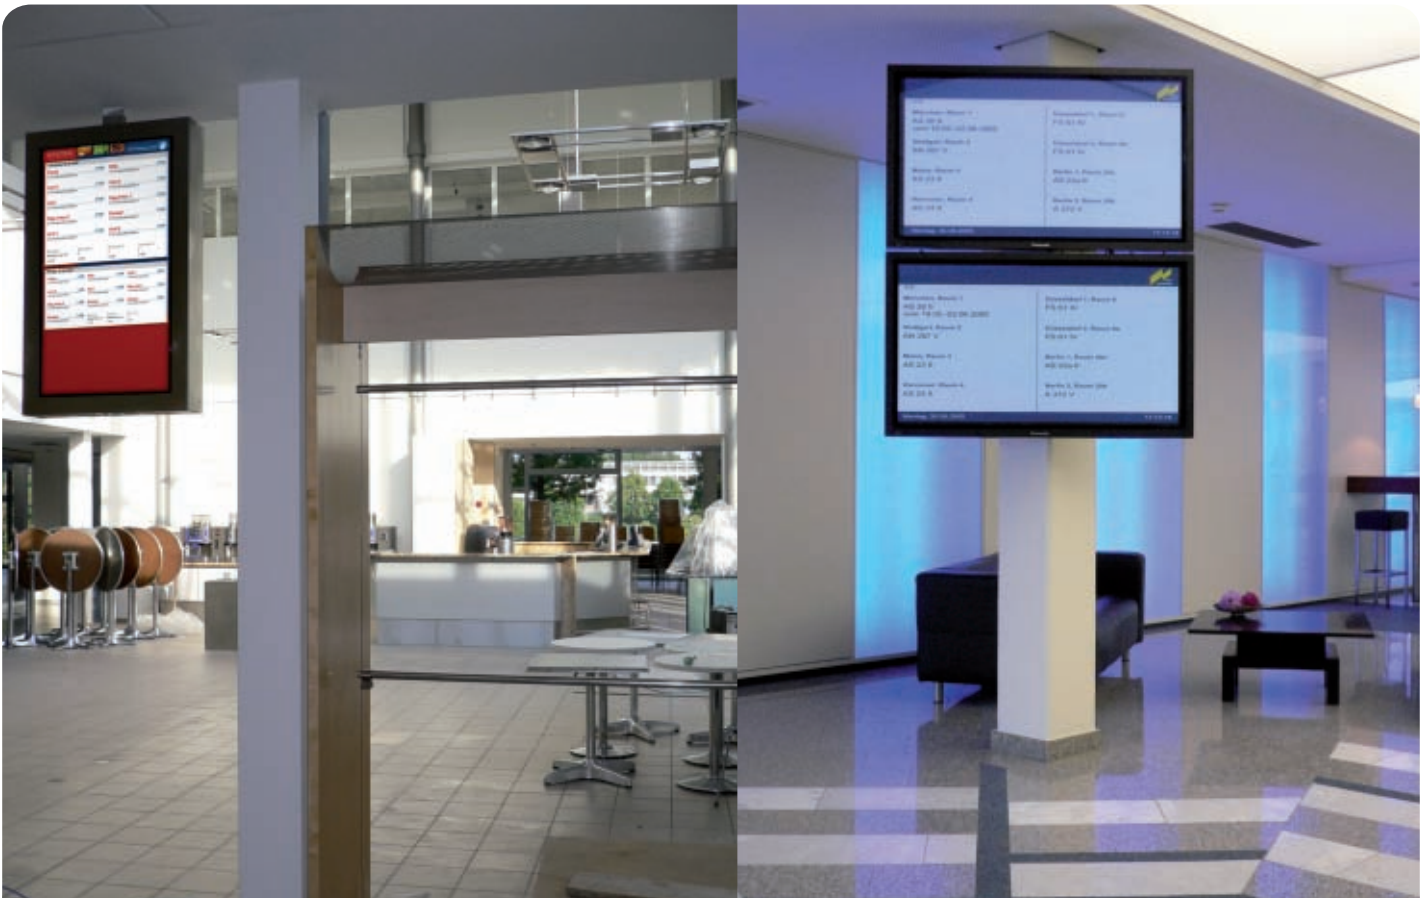

Exams and courses can now be clearly displayed on monitors in the foyer or in the staffroom. If there are changes to the timetable or new plans for classroom cover, these can be integrated easily in the digital blackboard at the click of a mouse, so teachers and students always know what's happening. In the everyday life of the school, this central inputting of information means a significant lightening of the load. For example, urgent internal messages can be communicated immediately – even as a ticker.

Room plans and event schedules can also be found on the screens. Dates for parents' evenings or open days, and special events such as the school prom and concerts, can no longer be missed.

■ Centrally controlled

The display system can be accessed both from the school office and the staff room. Data can also be fed in externally, from partner schools for example. In addition, the system can potentially be refinanced by incorporating advertising and sponsorship partners on the screens.

A particular bonus:
editIT/playIT also allows the automatic inclusion of timetable-planning software. Thus the digital blackboard provides a quick overview in the case of changes (e.g. staff absence).
